I am concerned that regulation is being proposed to restrict investors' ability to utilize options trading in IRA and regular investment accounts. The trader who educates him or herself is able to mitigate risk by using options, and this regulation would eliminate the trader's opportunity to do so. The information to learn to do this is readily available on the internet at low cost and free in libraries. It does not take any special math ability or superior intelligence to learn to trade using options. Therefore I do not support RIN 1210-AB32 and request that this regulation not be allowed to pass.

Sincerely,

Stephanie Marra
